See the extract script in the zip file you downloaded for help. Main script has two options that help you extract the data files to your HDD: j:\Location\Files j:\Location\Data Files Determination of water mobility in de-icing salts using bovine serum albumin as a molecular probe. The water mobility of four kinds of de-icing salts [sodium sulphate, chloride, nitrate and magnesium nitrate] was determined by comparing the amplitudes of the normal diffusion peaks in gel permeation chromatography. The concentration of bovine serum albumin (BSA) in the eluents was changed to change the elution position of BSA and, hence, change the elution position of these de-icing salts. In this way, the separation of these de-icing salts from BSA was achieved. The mobility of the dissolved BSA molecules was then determined from the change in the elution position of BSA. The amplitudes of the diffusion peaks were evaluated by means of gel permeation chromatography. This method was compared with a method using polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis. It was found that the mobilities of f678ea9f9e
